A few things to know about the material:

Initial Color: Like any marble, Highland Gris can appear darker immediately after installation. This is due to moisture in the stone and setting materials. As it dries (which can take several days), the color is likely to lighten.

Natural Variation: Highland Gris can vary quite a bit from piece to piece—expect to see a mix of lighter and darker tiles, with soft to prominent gray veining throughout. Some tiles will have more movement, while others will be more uniform. This variety is part of its charm and what gives a natural stone installation so much depth and character—it's never a flat, repetitive look, but a surface full of variety and beauty.

Installation Notes:

- Dry-lay several pieces before installing to ensure a pleasing blend and distribution of coloration.
- Use a high-quality white thinset to prevent any shadowing or discoloration.
- Seal the marble after installation to protect against staining (once completely dry and no dark appearance is left).

All dolomitic stones tend to appear darker in color when the surface is polished whereas honed finishes appear lighter due of the nature of the duller surface. They also appear darker when they are wet. Field tile darkens significantly when installed.

When installed thoughtfully, marble delivers a timeless, elegant look. These notes aren't meant to cause concern—simply to educate so you know what to expect and love the end result for years to come.

Mosaic's honed and polished large format stone field tiles are all micro-beveled. This is an additional step that our manufacturers take to create a first quality, crisp and clean edge which in turn lends itself to a more beautiful installation.

Competitors do not always take this extra step. Typical stone in big box stores may have a straight cut edge, that shows chatter details such as this:

Please note: Mosaics and pencils do not have a microbevel. Also, Leathered finishes do not have a microbevel since the texture is applied all the way to the edges.

Mosaic's stones are a premium selection to ensure best possible results. The image on the left shows our inventory, while the image on the right shows the more diagonally veined and less consistent material that we have our manufacturers pull out to ensure that only the most beautiful premium stones arrive to us.
